RakWeb: the web based version of Raketu

Filed in archive Companies by on June 12, 2007

Now you would not require downloading Raketu softphone and wasting your precious disk space as the web based version of its VoIP desktop application has been launched which would make it even simpler to make VoIP calls. Dubbed as RakWeb the services offered are similar to that of their desktop application.

The service can be customized to ensure that some of the features are not accessible to their employees so that they can concentrate on their office work. Raketu has already met success and this can be judged from its numbers - it has been downloaded 1.5 million times. It is ideal for all those public computers which do not permit certain applications to be downloaded. The call rates of RakWeb are different from the one being offered under RakOut.
